Mr. Tata as to the cendition of the business.

"It is rapidly growing," said he. "We now have here in India over 200 mills, and 200 more could be established and run at a profit. Most of our mills work day and night, and we cannot supply the demand. Our home market is enormous. We have $90,000,000 people, and they all dress in cottons. Just over the way is China, which is waking up to the western civilization and increasing its wants. There are 400,000,000 there who wear cottons. There is a hig market in Farther India, and to the west of us as well as in Africa. Indeed, the markets for the cotton mills of this particular the cotton mills of this particular than the cotton mills of the cotton mills of

PASSED BULLOCK CARTS CAR-RYING COTTON.

BY FRANK G. CARPENTER.

I have had a chat with one of the st progressive millionaires of the Asiatic Continent. I refer to D. J. Tata, the head of the rich Tata family, which owns the Taj Mahal, at Bombay, the biggest hotel of the fareast; which holds the majority of stock in the largest cotton mills of Inria, and which is about starting a steel and iron industry here in Hindustan, which may make them the Carpersis of Asia.

The Wealthy Tatas.

Have you ever heard of the Tatas?
Their family is to Hindustan what the Misuis are to Japan, the Rothehilds to Europe or the Vanderbiits and Astors to the United States. It is a family of millionaires, which makes its money breed like Australian rabbits, and whose every touch turns all things to

It is one of the oldest families of priesthood and went into trade. The great-grandfather of the present heads of the family was a government contractor at the time of our Civil War. He made and lost several fortunes and gave hundreds of thousands of rupces to the support of his faith.

Jamsetjee Nusserwanjee Tata, this man's son, came to Bombay as a boy, and engaged in general trading. He made money and invested in cotton mills and later on established a spin-ning and weaving industry, which has the foundation of the natives and will intradict the story of the great strated about mills and later on established a spin-ning and weaving industry, which has the foundation of the natives and will introduce way. of the world are so great that we do not need those of either Europe or America."

"Not the first. There was a cotton mill at Calcutta in 1818, and the first at Bombay was established in 1851. My father established his original mill much later. He was one of the first to start mills in the interior. He founded one at Nagpur in 1874, and, when he died, he was interested in many, not only here, but in other parts of the country. He was then employing altogether in his cotton mills alone about $,000 hands. Those mills are still working and are doing well. My father was the first to introduce ring spinning into India, and in this he revolutionized the industry."

"Tell me something about your labor element, Mr. Tata? Can the Hindoos handle machinery?"
"Yes. They are excellent factory hands. Our boys are especially good.
